Tamannaah Bhatia Radiates in Butter Yellow Manish Malhotra Gown at India Couture Week 2025

If dopamine dressing ever needed a red-carpet poster girl, Tamannaah Bhatia would fit the bill perfectly. The actor lit up Instagram and the runway alike in a butter yellow Manish Malhotra gown, straight from the designer's India Couture Week 2025 collection. Both soothing and statement-making, the look proved that colour alone can be couture's boldest accessory.

The gown, cut from luxurious crushed silk, carried a custard-yellow glow that radiated positivity. Its silhouette exuded modern romance: an off-the-shoulder, plunging neckline paired with a body-hugging corset-inspired bodice that cinched delicately at the waist. Subtle pleating and structured panelling drew the eye inward, enhancing her hourglass shape. A ruched knot-like detail at the waist served as the sculptural focal point, anchoring the fabric's fluid cascade while preventing monotony in the sea of yellow.

In true Tamannaah style, restraint defined the styling. She paired the gown with only diamond stud earrings, letting the colour and construction command full attention. Her beauty look mirrored the minimalism: glossy skin, brushed-out waves, and nude lips kept things effortless, while a hint of pink shimmer on her eyelids and bold red nails injected the right amount of contrast.

What makes this appearance stand out is its play on colour psychology. Butter yellow—once considered too soft for couture's dramatic stage—emerges here as a power statement. The gown reiterates what Bhatia herself champions: fashion isn't just about clothes, it's about how colour makes you feel. Where jewel tones once reigned supreme in festive wardrobes, pastel-infused palettes like this one are steadily redefining occasion wear with their quiet confidence.

With this outing, Tamannaah Bhatia cements herself as the face of dopamine dressing, proving that joy, optimism, and glamour can all come wrapped in one unforgettable shade of yellow.
