Malaika Arora Knows She's Made Fashion Mistakes & Yet, Won't Stop Being Experimental

There are very few Bollywood stars who command as much attention for their everyday looks as Malaika Arora. Whether it's stepping out of her yoga studio or attending a glamorous soirée, the paparazzi lens loves her. But behind the glitzy façade, Malaika admits that her fashion journey has been anything but perfect — and she wouldn't have it any other way.

"I've always felt fashionable ever since I was a kid — whether it was about making my own clothes or styling my looks every time we stepped out. The love for fashion has always been there. Along the way, you learn from your hits and misses. I've had my fair share of some terrible fashion moments too, but I learnt from my mistakes," she reveals.

Comfort Over Couture

For Malaika, the ultimate rule of style is comfort.

"You could be wearing the most amazing couture, but if you're not comfortable, it's not worth it. Confidence adds to your fashion persona. It's trial-and-error and over the years, I've experimented a lot," she says.

Her ability to own her choices — whether praised or criticized — is what makes her fashion-forward and relatable.

Fashion As Fierce Expression

Malaika's chic outings, including her recent appearance in a classic white dress with her son, prove she can flip between casual and glam seamlessly. But for her, fashion isn't just about aesthetics — it's emotional.

"Fashion is a way of expressing yourself, whether it is your mood, your attitude, or your awareness. Fashion makes you feel fierce. There are times when you even hide behind fashion. It's an expression of speech that speaks for itself," she adds.

The Takeaway

Malaika Arora's style journey is proof that fashion isn't about being flawless — it's about fearlessly experimenting, owning your narrative, and wearing confidence like couture. And in her own words, mistakes are just stepping stones to fierceness.
