

Sabrina Carpenter Channels Naomi Campbell's Iconic Look in "Tears" Video

Sabrina Carpenter's Fashion Tribute

Sabrina Carpenter's latest music video, Tears, is not only a visual spectacle but also a bold showcase of fashion history. Among her many striking looks, one stood out above the rest—Carpenter wore a vintage Victoria's Secret outfit that was first modeled by supermodel Naomi Campbell during the 2003 Victoria's Secret Fashion Show.

The shimmering silver fringe bra, paired with sheer pink underwear and matching fringe armbands, created a look that was both nostalgic and cutting-edge. Carpenter styled the ensemble with silver Mary Jane heels, glamorous waves, and bold makeup, bringing a modern pop-star energy to an archival piece of runway history.

A Cinematic Music Video

The Tears video itself plays out like a short film, shifting from noir-inspired visuals to campy, theatrical scenes. Carpenter opens the video styled as a Hitchcock blonde, dressed in a classic skirt suit and white hat. The scene then pivots into a risqué pole-dance moment where she wears a white-and-blue lingerie set with garter belt and lace stockings, filmed in the middle of a cornfield—an unexpected yet striking contrast.

As the narrative unfolds, Carpenter moves through mirrored rooms, disco-lit dance breaks, and surreal scenes featuring Coleman Domingo in drag. But the high point for fashion lovers is undoubtedly the vintage Victoria's Secret look, an archival gem reimagined through Carpenter's playful yet glamorous performance.

Why the Look Resonates

Sabrina Carpenter's decision to wear Naomi Campbell's original runway outfit goes beyond nostalgia. It reflects how fashion is cyclical, with archival pieces finding new relevance in today's pop culture. By reviving this 2003 Victoria's Secret ensemble, Carpenter creates a direct link between two eras of glamour—Campbell's dominance on the runway and her own rising star power in music and fashion.

This styling choice also highlights a broader trend: celebrities and stylists increasingly draw on vintage runway pieces to create standout red carpet and video moments. It's no longer just about the latest designer collection; it's about curating a fashion narrative that honors the past while making it feel fresh.

A Modern Fashion Muse

Fans and critics alike have praised Carpenter for her daring fashion choices. Known for her bold stage costumes, red carpet risks, and high-fashion editorials, she is carving out a reputation as a modern fashion muse. Wearing a look once owned by Naomi Campbell not only acknowledges the influence of legendary supermodels but also places Carpenter within that same lineage of iconic style moments.

With Tears, Sabrina Carpenter proves she's not just making music—she's making statements. Each costume change in the video tells a story, but the vintage Victoria's Secret outfit is the ultimate showstopper. By channeling Naomi Campbell, Carpenter has turned her video into a celebration of fashion history and cemented herself as one of pop culture's most fearless style risk-takers.
