The Wednesday Season 2 “Graveyard Gala” in New York City was nothing short of a gothic spectacle, and the red carpet belonged to two powerhouse icons: Lady Gaga and Jenna Ortega. Both stars delivered unforgettable witchy goth red carpet looks, setting the tone for the series’ return while reminding fans that fashion can be as impactful as the show itself.

Jenna Ortega, who continues to embody Wednesday Addams both on and off screen, stunned in a custom GapStudio creation designed by Zac Posen. The piece, a charcoal-toned T-shirt dress, merged deconstructed couture with a gothic edge. Slashes and cutouts gave the outfit a rebellious Y2K touch, revealing a black lace bra beneath the sweetheart neckline. The smoky, fog-inspired fabric effect, halter straps, and dramatic fringe hemline brought a haunting yet romantic feel. Styled by Enrique Melendez, Ortega completed the look with a statement handbag embossed with a sculptural hand—an homage to Wednesday’s loyal sidekick, Thing.

Her style resonated as a contemporary twist on gothic fashion. By blending edgy streetwear details with couture craftsmanship, Ortega showcased how the goth aesthetic continues to evolve while staying true to its eerie roots.

On the other end of the spectrum, Lady Gaga—never one to shy away from avant-garde fashion—made jaws drop with her theatrical ensemble. Portraying Rosaline Rotwood in the new season, Gaga leaned fully into the witchy-goth narrative with a jeweled corset, ruffled sleeves, and voluminous pantaloons. Her dramatic jester-inspired umbrella hat, designed by Matthew David Andrews and Jenny Beattie, transformed the red carpet into a stage. Every element of Gaga’s look reflected her signature ability to marry performance art with fashion, leaving fans captivated.

The pairing of Gaga and Ortega created a powerful duality on the red carpet: Ortega’s understated dark romanticism contrasted beautifully with Gaga’s bold, theatrical spectacle. Yet together, they offered a unified vision of gothic glamour that perfectly mirrored the mysterious and eerie world of Wednesday.

Why Their Looks Stole the Show

- Gothic Harmony: Both stars leaned into the witchy goth theme while expressing individuality.
- Fashion Storytelling: Each outfit amplified their connection to the Wednesday universe.

- Boundary-Pushing Design: From couture cutouts to wearable fantasy, both ensembles proved gothic fashion can be modern and daring.

The Wednesday Season 2 premiere red carpet was more than just a glamorous event—it was an artistic statement. Gaga and Ortega demonstrated how clothing can transcend mere aesthetics, becoming an extension of character, mood, and narrative. Their witchy goth red carpet looks not only honored the show's darker tone but also set the bar for future fashion moments this season.
