Ciara Brings Back Her Iconic Lucite Converse Heels in 'CiCi' Era

A Nostalgic Fashion Moment Reimagined

In the music video for “Dance With Me” featuring Tyga, from her new album CiCi, Ciara resurrects her iconic Converse-style lucite heels after a 15-year hiatus. Evoking her unforgettable look from the “Gimme Dat” video (2010), this time the platform shoe comes in vibrant bubblegum pink, perfectly matched to her candy-colored aesthetic and vintage pink Cadillac set.

Fashion Meets Narrative Reinvention

The video is a nostalgic vision: Ciara wears head-to-toe pink—silk bandana, cargo-set, and baggy pants—paired with the towering lucite sneaker-heels. This styling choice isn't just aesthetic, it's symbolic. It stands as a powerful reclaiming of her fashion narrative—a move that reflects her newfound artistic freedom after past label struggles during the “Basic Instinct” era.

Artistic Empowerment Through Fashion

At age 39, Ciara is embracing a fearless disregard for critics. As she told Page Six last year: “Opinions don't matter...if you feel good about what you chose to wear, that's all that matters.” The return of the lucite Converse heels isn't just a throwback—it's a statement of empowerment and autonomy amid her independent release of CiCi under her own label, Beauty Marks Entertainment.
