

Naomi Osaka's Red-Blaze Court Couture at US Open

A Playful Collision of Fashion and Sport

Naomi Osaka made her US Open return a spectacle of style. Clad in a crystal-embellished red Nike mini-dress and cropped jacket, she blended runway drama with court readiness. Her shimmering look was styled with matching 'Naomi Osaka' red GP Challenge 1 sneakers, crystal-studded headphones, and includes a dazzling Labubu mascot—"Billie Jean Bling"—dangling from her tennis bag.

Blooming with Boldness

Her hair told its own story—braided into a ponytail adorned with crystal roses, later swapped for a high bun, but not before the final rose remained as she served. It was a fashion bloom symbolic of her floral-themed looks this tennis season.

Osaka previously embraced floral motifs—sunflowers at the Australian Open, cherry blossoms at Roland Garros, and now red roses in New York. It's a sartorial diary in petals.

A Mascot That Sparkles

No detail was too small to glam up. Her Labubu bag charm—made entirely of crystals and holding a mini tennis racket—became a viral highlight. Osaka cheekily dedicated it to Billie Jean King with the nickname "Billie Jean Bling."

Designing Under Lights

According to Osaka, the elaborate outfit was somewhat last-minute—planned just two weeks prior with Nike and her stylist—but proved even more stunning than imagined. She noted the magic of performing under night lights, calling it her "night outfit."

Winning With Style

Her look wasn't just about flair—it matched performance. Osaka delivered a dominant first-round victory against Greet Minnen (6-3, 6-4), firing seven aces and converting all break points.

Fashion as Narrative

Osaka treats the court like a stage—her outfits are storytelling, a personal form of expression. These fashion moments are bold commentary on self-expression, showing that athletes can embrace style and strength in equal measure.
