Actress Lola Tung captivated attendees at Miu Miu's exclusive Miutine fragrance launch party in New York City, held on September 5, 2025. The event, which featured a live performance by Maggie Rogers, attracted a host of fashion-forward celebrities, but it was Tung's ensemble that truly stole the spotlight.

For the occasion, Tung donned a schoolgirl-inspired outfit that perfectly blended youthful charm with sophisticated elegance. She wore a pleated blue-and-white plaid miniskirt paired with a navy wool bomber jacket, creating a balanced look that was both playful and polished. Her calf-high socks, embroidered with delicate patterns, added a touch of whimsy to the ensemble.

Completing her look, Tung chose patent leather slingback heels adorned with gold buckle detailing, adding a hint of glamour to her outfit. She accessorized with a matching leather bag, further enhancing the coordinated aesthetic.

Tung's beauty look was equally refined. Her brown hair was parted down the middle and styled in a straight, natural manner, complementing her understated makeup. She sported rosy cheeks, feathery brows, glossy pink lips, and shimmering eyes that peered through her frameless glasses, embodying the essence of Miu Miu's Miutine fragrance—a warm blend of wild strawberry, vanilla, brown sugar, and patchouli.

The Miutine party also saw appearances from other notable figures, including Paloma Elsesser, Sunday Rose Kidman, Chloë Sevigny, Amelia Gray, and Emma Chamberlain, each bringing their unique style to the event. The evening was a celebration of Miu Miu's latest fragrance, reflecting the brand's commitment to blending tradition with modernity.

Tung's appearance at the Miutine party further solidifies her status as a rising fashion icon, known for her ability to effortlessly merge vintage influences with contemporary trends. Her ensemble at the event was a testament to her keen fashion sense and her ability to capture the essence of Miu Miu's aesthetic.
