Janhvi Kapoor Celebrates Kashmiri Craft at Toronto Film Festival

Janhvi Kapoor dazzled at the Toronto Film Festival wearing a resham sari by Abu Jani Sandeep Khosla, honouring Kashmiri craftsmanship.

She combined vintage jamawar textiles and luxurious silks within her ensemble, seamlessly merging tradition with contemporary red-carpet glamour for a striking impact.

The sari carried intricate resham embroidery inspired by classical jamawar motifs, showcasing rich patterns typical of Kashmir's renowned artisan traditions.

Through her choice, Janhvi celebrated heritage craftsmanship, revealing delicate details and timeless skills rarely visible on global festival red carpets.

Design Elements

The sari's resham embroidery reimagined ornate jamawar motifs, keeping roots in Kashmiri lineage while embracing modern fashion sensibilities beautifully.

Additionally, designers incorporated silks and vintage jamawar jackets from 1980s archives, blending age-old fabrics with innovative styling choices effectively.

An antique jamawar shawl draped gracefully over her shoulders featured handmade silk resham tassels, adding texture, depth, and striking richness.

Fashion Commentary and Influence

Vogue India's fashion associate described the ensemble as a study in heritage maximalism, where brocade, embroidery, and Kashmiri weaves converged.

He suggested that pairing a sleek bun hairstyle with kohl-heavy eyes could enhance the regal mood and traditional richness.

Furthermore, velvet juttis might ground the look in craft sensibility, offering an authentic alternative to red-carpet footwear preferences.

Overall, the styling choices demonstrated valuable lessons for individuals seeking culturally rich yet internationally appropriate red-carpet fashion statements today. Unquestionably, this powerful appearance will influence demand for resham embroidery, jamawar motifs, and heritage silks among designers and enthusiasts globally.
