

Tamannaah Bhatia Revives Fringe Glamour in Hervé Léger

Published on 12 Sep 2025 | By IFI Correspondent

Tamannaah Bhatia recently stepped out for a promotional evening, and once again, she proved her strong fashion presence.

Styled by Leepakshi Ellawadi and her creative team, she chose The Ines Gown from Hervé Léger's striking collection. The black gown was body-skimming and sharply detailed with bold cut-outs; therefore, it created instant visual intrigue. Moreover, silver hardware punctuated the monochrome look, while pumps, jewellery, and shimmery eyes completed the striking ensemble.

The Dress: Structure with Movement

The gown featured four cut-outs around the midriff and thigh areas, which added subtle drama to the design. In addition, metallic beads broke the uniform shade, ensuring the outfit carried both texture and glamorous appeal. A square neckline with thick straps provided structure; meanwhile, the ankle-grazing fringed hem introduced bohemian fluidity.

Consequently, each step swung the fringe, creating delightful movement and contrast against the gown's tailored construction.

Fringe: Trend Revival and Evolution

Fringe has made its runway return, but this time it carries a new attitude with fresh experimental materials. Designers are therefore using thread, leather, metal, and crystal fringe across tailored fits, boxy silhouettes, and fluid hems.

For instance, Bottega Veneta showcased hooded creations, while Ralph Lauren and Isabel Marant celebrated tasselled skirts.

Additionally, Schiaparelli and Lacoste explored fringe in Fall/Winter 2025 with coats and co-ords; Louis Vuitton added textured skirts.

Balancing Beauty and Accessories

Tamannaah's beauty choices complemented the gown's drama; however, they never competed with its strong visual statement.

Her soft waves mirrored the fringe's flow, while smoky, iridescent eyes added depth and shine.

Furthermore, rosy cheeks and muted pink lips created harmony, balancing boldness with subtle elegance.

Silver earrings and stacked rings added metallic accents, whereas classic black Louboutin sling pumps grounded the outfit.

Vogue's Styling Tips: Fringe Beyond Evening

According to Vogue India's Associate Fashion Editor, Divya Balakrishnan, fringe should not remain confined to glamorous evenings.

Instead, she recommends experimenting with fringe during the day to keep the trend fresh and versatile.

For example, she suggests pairing a tasselled knit or crochet skirt with a simple tee for relaxed yet chic style.

Moreover, adding sneakers or stacked bangles can balance the playfulness of fringe with everyday practicality.

The appearance quickly drew praise from fashion enthusiasts for its boldness, yet also for its polished execution.

Above all, critics noted the strong harmony between accessories, makeup, and design; consequently, nothing felt overwhelming.

Overall, everything worked together seamlessly, reinforcing the fringe narrative while celebrating modern evening glamour.
