They confirmed their romance in 2024, and engaged five months before wedding. Although their relationship was relatively short publicly, their commitment seemed deeply rooted. Therefore, they wanted a wedding that felt intimate and reflective of their personalities

DIY-Styled Wedding: Personal Touches

Instead of hiring professionals for everything, Natasha handled many details herself. She designed custom invitations, signage, and personally wrote thank-you notes.

Thus, their wedding turned into an arts-and-crafts workshop environment beforehand.

Walking down the aisle, Natasha was escorted by her father. They chose “Mia & Sebastian’s Theme” from La La Land for the moment. Also, live jazz played during ceremony and cocktail hour at groom’s insistence.

Their first dance was to Again by Doris Day & The Mellomen.

The Bridal Look & Symbolism

Natasha wore a gown by Kinsley Couture Bridal, featuring floral lace and princess silhouette.

Also, her “something blue” was her mother Candace wearing blue instead of just an item.

That gesture carried deep personal meaning for Natasha and her family.

Decor included lush white florals, soft greenery, and cream-champagne colour palette.

For dessert, heart-shaped carrot cake and gelato from a cart delighted many.

Natasha is daughter of Candace Cameron Bure (actress) and Valeri Bure (ice-hockey player). Thus, this union draws attention both because of celebrity lineages and personal creativity.
