

Sabrina Carpenter Channels Vintage Glam on Vogue Italia's October Cover

Published on 25 Sep 2025 | By IFI Correspondent

Singer-songwriter Sabrina Carpenter fronts the October 2025 issue of Vogue Italia, shot by iconic photographer Steven Meisel. The cover blends retro sensuality with modern edge, reviving boudoir style from the 1960s yet making it feel fresh. Carpenter's vintage-inspired look captures both nostalgia and innovation.

Style Team & Creative Details

The fashion direction was helmed by stylist Karl Templer. Hair styling was done by Guido Palau, while makeup was by legendary Pat McGrath. Carpenter appears in pieces that evoke boudoir sensibilities—silk, lace, lingerie-details—paired with major Italian designers. Her hair is styled in a striking new long bob (“lob”) with a flippy volume reminiscent of '60s and '90s glam.

Reflective, Bold in the Interview

In the interview, Carpenter reflects on femininity, identity, and creativity. She describes femininity as “not a mask but an experiment, a shifting character I can write and rewrite every day.” She also speaks of community and growth—how the people around her have accompanied her rise over the past decade. Her sense of style emerges as deeply tied to authenticity, experimentation, and evolving self-expression.

The Moment & Momentum

Therefore cover comes at a high point: Carpenter's recent album Man's Best Friend has gained strong traction. She's just wrapped up festival shows and is gearing up for the Short n' Sweet Tour in cities like Austin, Nashville, Pittsburgh, and New York. Finally issue of Vogue Italia will hit newsstands on September 26, 2025.
