Published on 03 Oct 2025 | By IFI Correspondent

Kendall Jenner closed Schiaparelli's Spring 2026 show in Paris in a daring, see-through gown. The gown was nearly naked — sheer top and skirt combined with a black G-string beneath. The outfit featured a thigh-high slit in the same translucent fabric. Under the lights, the look sparked debates over fashion boundaries.

Kylie's Reaction and Support

The Sheer Dress Trend Resurfaces

This appearance continues the resurgence of the naked dress or sheer trend on red carpets and runways. Kendall's risk-taking look aligns with other recent bold sheer statements by celebrities. Moreover, fashion commentators say such styles test the boundary between daring and art.

Fashion, Family, and Spectacle

The moment became not just fashion news, but a family spectacle—Kylie cheering for Kendall in full public view. Because of their celebrity status, every move draws attention. Yet this time, it was the blend of sisterhood and style that stood out. At the same time, critics are dissecting whether the look empowers or provokes.

Impact and Reactions

Social media lit up soon after Kendall's walk. Fans called her fearless, while style editors praised the audacity. Some questioned modesty norms, others lauded body confidence. Across platforms, the outfit became one of the top shared moments of the show.
