

Meghan Markle Stuns in Asymmetrical Black Gown

Published on 06 Oct 2025 | By IFI Correspondent

Meghan Markle made a rare public appearance at Paris Fashion Week, attending Balenciaga's Spring/Summer 2026 womenswear show. This marked her first time at the event, although she had previously attended New York and Toronto Fashion Weeks over a decade ago during her time on Suits .

A Nod to Designer Pierpaolo Piccioli

The Duchess of Sussex was at the show to support Balenciaga's new creative director, Pierpaolo Piccioli. A representative stated that Meghan has long admired Piccioli's craftsmanship and modern elegance, and this evening reflected years of artistry and friendship .

A Timeless Black Gown with a Modern Twist

For the occasion, Meghan wore a custom black gown featuring an asymmetrical half-cape that draped elegantly over one shoulder. She paired the dress with satin black heels, diamond stud earrings, and gold bracelets, completing the look with her hair swept back in a sleek bun and a natural makeup palette .

A Stylish Weekend in Paris

Earlier in the weekend, Meghan attended another Balenciaga show, wearing a dramatic white ensemble with a cape that trailed behind her. Both outfits showcased her appreciation for Piccioli's designs and her timeless sense of style
