

Kim Kardashian Turns Heads in Sheer Vintage Maison Margiela

Published on 08 Oct 2025 | By IFI Correspondent

Kim Kardashian made a striking appearance at Paris Fashion Week, showcasing a daring ensemble from Maison Margiela's 1990s collection. The reality star and entrepreneur embraced the "naked dressing" trend with a sheer vintage tube top and a semi-couture skirt, turning heads as she stepped out from the Ritz Hotel in Paris.

The Ensemble: A Nod to '90s Margiela

Kardashian's outfit featured a sheer, milky white tube top that left much of her torso exposed, embodying the minimalist yet provocative style of Martin Margiela's '90s designs. She paired the top with a flowing off-white skirt that included a gray acid-washed mini layer adorned with printed text. A waist string tied into a small bow across her bare belly completed the ensemble, highlighting her bold fashion choices.

Accessories and Styling: Understated Elegance

To complement her outfit, Kardashian opted for minimalistic accessories, including a thick silver arm cuff and metallic sandal heels. Her sleek, choppy hairstyle added a modern edge to the vintage-inspired look. This ensemble exemplified the chic Parisian approach to "naked dressing," combining sensuality with sophistication.

A Week of Fashion Highlights

Kardashian's appearance at Paris Fashion Week was part of a memorable week, during which she also debut her new choppy hairstyle. She was named to the BoF 500 list, recognizing her influence in the fashion industry. With ensembles like this, her continued presence at major fashion events underscores her status as a style icon.

Kim Kardashian's choice to wear a vintage Maison Margiela piece at Paris Fashion Week not only paid homage to the designer's iconic '90s aesthetic but also showcased her ability to blend archival fashion with contemporary trends. Her bold fashion choices continue to inspire and influence the fashion world.
