

Aubrey Plaza Gives Business-Casual a Spooky, Sheer Twist

Published on 11 Oct 2025 | By IFI Correspondent

Aubrey Plaza once again proved that she is a master of unexpected fashion moments. When she appeared on The View recently, the actress turned heads in a striking two-piece suit layered over a semi-sheer brown top. The look, equal parts bold and refined, blurred the lines between business casual and after-hours glamour. It demonstrated how the actress continues to balance sophistication with subversion, much like the complex characters she's known for playing.

A bold take on businesswear

At first glance, Plaza's ensemble appeared to be a straightforward suit, but a closer look revealed a much more daring interpretation. Her beige pinstripe suit by Camilla and Marc was a masterclass in power dressing reimagined for 2025. Crafted from a wool blend, the short-sleeve blazer featured elongated lapels that plunged into a deep V neckline, creating a silhouette that was both architectural and fluid.

Moreover, the decision to shorten the sleeves gave the piece an avant-garde edge — something rarely seen in traditional suiting. The cut exposed just enough skin to make it seasonally transitional, ideal for moving from daytime commitments to evening engagements with effortless grace. While the structure of the blazer lent authority, its fluid tailoring softened the impact, embodying Plaza's trademark mix of confidence and ease.

Layering that speaks volumes

Beneath the meticulously tailored jacket, Plaza wore a semi-sheer brown top that added an element of intrigue. The sheer fabric, with its delicate transparency, contrasted beautifully with the heavier pinstripe wool of the suit. Its mock neck and central seam grounded the look, preventing it from veering into overt sensuality. Instead, it exuded a subtle, controlled allure — one that played with visibility without losing sophistication.

Additionally, the sheer layer brought movement and dimension to the outfit. As light caught the fabric, it created depth against the neutral tones of the blazer and trousers, proving how well-placed transparency can elevate an otherwise classic silhouette. The layering choice was undeniably deliberate — a quiet rebellion against the rigidity of traditional tailoring.

Structured elegance through tailoring

Plaza's trousers completed the ensemble with equal finesse. Matching the blazer in tone and texture, they featured a wide-leg cut with precise pintucks, offering structure while allowing fluidity. This combination of sharp lines and soft drape struck a perfect balance between authority and ease.

Furthermore, the wide-leg silhouette elongated her frame, reinforcing the commanding yet graceful presence of the look. It was a reminder that true tailoring isn't just about fit
