In a spectacular fusion of sport and style, Delhi couturier Sahil Kochhar stepped into the spotlight when he styled Carl Lewis for an unforgettable runway moment.

What made the occasion extra special: Lewis isn't just any showstopper—he's an athletic icon, a multiple Olympic gold medalist.

Thus, to dress him was as much an honor as it was a challenge.

The Event: Breaking Barriers

The occasion was “Breaking Barriers — A 20-Year Odyssey”, celebrating two decades of the Vedanta Delhi Half Marathon.

Fitness, fashion, and social spirit converged as athletes, celebrities, and leaders walked the ramp together. In that lineup, Carl Lewis took center stage in a custom outfit by Kochhar.

The Creation: Art Meets Athleticism

Kochhar's vision was bold yet symbolic.

He designed a black bandhgala jacket paired with matching trousers. However, the true standout detail was the sunray motif stretching from the jacket's back.

Brass detailing at the neckline added gravitas and contrast.

For Lewis, who had walked many fashion shows before, this one felt different—personal.

Symbolism & Style

Kochhar didn't just design a beautiful outfit—he told a story.

The sunrays suggest rising above, endurance, energy, and optimism.

Meanwhile, the black base color grounds the look—asserting strength and elegance over flamboyance.
