

Ananya Panday Dazzles in Patola Corset & Bandhani Saree

Published on 13 Oct 2025 | By IFI Correspondent

Ananya Panday made a striking style statement recently when she appeared in a bold ensemble by legendary designers Abu Jani & Sandeep Khosla.

Instead of a conventional saree look, she opted for a creative fusion: a Patola corset top matched with a Bandhani draped saree.

Her look instantly became the talk of fashion circles, thanks to its mix of heritage textiles and contemporary cuts.

The Look: Fusion of Textiles

The upper piece — a structured corset in Patola weave — lent sharpness and architectural flair.

Below, the saree flowed in classic Bandhani print, rich in regional craft.

Together, the combination struck a balance between boldness and tradition.

The color palette was vibrant yet elegant.

The contrast between the intricate Patola motifs and the dotted Bandhani patterns created visual intrigue.

Accessories were minimal, allowing the outfit's craftsmanship to shine.

Her makeup was likely clean and radiant, and her hair styled in a way that complemented the modern-traditional mix.

Why This Ensemble Resonated

First, it challenged norms.

Instead of sticking to a blouse + saree combo, Ananya's corset mix showed how couture and handloom can intersect.

Second, it paid tribute to Indian heritage crafts.

Patola (from Gujarat) and Bandhani are both iconic weaves—when placed together, they celebrate craftsmanship from multiple regions.

Third, it reinforced her image as a fashion risk-taker.

She's not just wearing trends—she's contributing to how they evolve.

Reception & Impact

Fashion critics and fans alike lauded the ensemble for its bold creativity and cultural resonance.

Social media lit up with acknowledgments of her poise, her styling choices, and the way she carried the look.

Designers will likely take note: the success of such fusion looks may spur more experimentation at future red carpets and fashion weeks.
