

Salman Khan as Showstopper for Vikram Phadnis' 35-Year Milestone

Published on 15 Oct 2025 | By IFI Correspondent

Bollywood's megastar Salman Khan made a dazzling appearance on the ramp at the grand celebration of Vikram Phadnis' 35 years in fashion and cinema. The event, held in Mumbai, turned into a night of nostalgia, glamour, and reunion as the actor walked as the showstopper for his longtime friend and designer.

Here's an inside look at his look, the event, and what made this moment special.

The Outfit: Regal, Refined, and Royal

Salman took to the ramp in a black sherwani richly embroidered with silver threadwork. The attire merged traditional grandeur with a modern silhouette.

The embroidery was intricate but not ostentatious. It traced motifs and borders with precision, allowing the dark base and sharp tailoring to hold their own. His stands, shoulders, and drape all spoke of a well-considered balance.

Often as a colour choice, speaks to power, formality, and confidence. Therefore it allowed the silver accents and fine work to shine without overshadowing the man. The ensemble felt majestic without tipping into excess.

The Walk, the Aura

When Salman stepped onto that runway, the air shifted. He carried presence. He walked with ease, yet with the poised gait of a seasoned showstopper. His charisma filled the frame.

His walk was understated—no overblown drama, but a quiet command. In that moment, fashion and persona merged; he wasn't just a star walking a ramp, but a friend celebrating a creative journey.

Reunions, Friends & the Emotional Undercurrent

The evening also marked a heartfelt reunion between Salman and Sushmita Sen, who has collaborated with Vikram Phadnis in the past. Their onstage camaraderie added nostalgia. Several industry names were in attendance. The event doubled as both celebration and a gathering of the fashion-film fraternity. Finally it underscored how relationships over decades in Bollywood and couture endure through shifts in style and era.
