

Kim Kardashian Stuns in Sculptural Schiaparelli Gown

On 16 October 2025 in Los Angeles, business mogul and TV personality Kim?Kardashian made headlines at the premiere of her forthcoming legal-drama series All's Fair. And while all eyes were on the show, her red-carpet look stole the spotlight. She arrived wearing a sculptural haute couture gown by Schiaparelli — a design that fused classic glamour with contemporary edge.

The gown featured a nude satin base layered under sheer black tulle, with a halter neckline and dramatic draped skirt that flowed into a subtle flourish. Kardashian paired the look with diamond stud earrings, a slicked-back up-do, and minimal accessories.

Shared Spotlight with Mother and Co-Stars

Kardashian was joined on the red carpet by her mother, Kris?Jenner, who serves as an executive producer on the show. Jenner opted for a bold contrast: a butter-yellow mini dress from Givenchy, cinched at the waist, paired with black tights and heels.

Their presence underscored the star-power backing Kardashian's scripted-drama debut.

Fashion Meets Character & Career Shift

The choice of Schiaparelli was deeply fitting. Kardashian plays Allura Grant, a high-powered divorce lawyer who leads an all-female law firm in the series. The couture gown's structured silhouette and bold detailing echoed her character's confidence and authority — bridging her onscreen persona.

Reception and Style Impact

Fashion observers praised the look as a standout moment — elegant, bold, and spot-on for a premiere of this magnitude. The interplay of nude satin and sheer black tulle brought both softness and edge. The pairing of mother-daughter looks, each distinct yet complementary, added depth to the red-carpet narrative.
