

Kriti Sanon Glimmers in Red Sharara for Diwali from Her Sister's Label

Published on 21 Oct 2025 | By IFI Correspondent

This Diwali, Kriti Sanon chose a striking red sharara set that turned heads. And notably, the outfit came from her sister Nupur's label. In doing so, she blended personal style with family support.

The colour choice—rich crimson—felt both traditional and fresh. It set the tone for a night of celebration and captured the festive spirit effortlessly.

The Outfit: Sharara Set with Sister-Brand Cred

Kriti's ensemble featured a classic sharara silhouette: wide-leg trousers (or skirt-style sharara) paired with a bridge-length kurta and dupatta. The fabric was lush and the embroidery detailed, matching the grandeur of Diwali.

By wearing a piece from her sister's brand, she spotlighted their family connection and the entrepreneurial venture. Plus, the red-and-gold aesthetic felt fitting for Diwali—radiant, warm and elegant.

Styling Details That Stand Out

She kept accessories elegant. Gold jewellery complemented the embroidery and matched the festive palette. Hair and makeup remained polished—emphasising her glow without overshadowing the outfit.

The overall styling let the sharara take centre stage. Which is key for festive dressing: letting one bold element shine, while the rest supports it.

Why This Look Hits the Mark

- Sister-support meets fashion: Shopping from Nupur's label gave the look an extra layer of meaning.
- Classic colour pairing: Red is timeless for festivals; the gold accents made it celebratory without being over-the-top.
- Sharara revival: The sharara set feels traditional yet has regained traction in modern festive styling.
- Balanced glam: The outfit struck a balance—festive but not costume-like; bold but not flamboyant.
