At her Diwali celebration, Rakul Preet Singh chose a soft, pastel-toned lehenga by Aisha Rao. According to media coverage, the outfit stood out for its delicate palette and refined detailing—balancing festive glamour with modern elegance.

Style & Design Details

- The lehenga is in a pastel hue, likely a soft blush or muted champagne tone—reflecting current festive-wear trends that favour gentle shades over bold primaries.
- The designer: Aisha Rao, known for luxe craftsmanship and contemporary silhouettes—her brand listing includes pastel sets among the palette choices.
- The embellishment appears subtle—likely fine embroidery, delicate sequins or soft beadwork rather than heavy heavy-metal zardozi—matching the “pastel-hued” descriptor.
- Styling appears to complement the soft palette: minimal heavy contrast jewellery, likely with choice of metallics that don’t overpower the softness of the outfit.
- For footwear and accessories: By the visual cues and typical styling, she might have gone for muted metallics or soft tones, keeping the overall feel light and cohesive.

Why This Look Works

- Trend-forward palette: Pastels are emerging strong in festive/celebration wear, offering sophistication and difference from traditional reds/maroons.
- Balance of festivity and elegance: While the occasion (Diwali) demands some glamour, the softness of colour and detailing keeps the look refined rather than overdone.
- Brand credentials + styling savvy: Choosing a recognised designer (Aisha Rao) and executing the look with restraint shows style confidence.
