Designer Ranna Gill, celebrated for her contemporary yet cosmopolitan aesthetic, recently unveiled two new fall collections — Autumn at Westbury and Tales from the Saddle. Together, the collections present a tapestry of romance, heritage, and strength, inspired by Tuscan landscapes, Parisian artistry, and the poetic grace of the horse — a timeless symbol of freedom and resilience.

Each collection carries Gill's signature blend of structured tailoring and fluid femininity, creating over 100 looks that seamlessly transition from day to soir  e.

"Autumn at Westbury celebrates heritage and refinement, while Tales from the Saddle channels equestrian strength and femininity," says Gill. "Together, they present a mood that's sophisticated yet bold, timeless yet modern."

Autumn at Westbury: A Study in Heritage and Opulence

Drawing on the richness of autumn's palette, this collection bathes in deep burgundies, forest greens, muted golds, and baroque-inspired prints. Think fluid gowns, structured jackets, and flowing maxi dresses — all rendered in luxurious linen, denim, velvet, and satin.

Intricate embroidery and sculptural cuts add texture and dimension, evoking the grandeur of European estates and the romance of old-world luxury.

Tales from the Saddle: The Equestrian Muse

This edit reimagines equestrian style through the lens of modern femininity. Expect earthy tones, ivory, black, and signature horse prints—a recurring motif that captures freedom and grace.

The silhouettes range from jumpsuits and tailored separates to flowy dresses and sharp jackets crafted in rich crepe, luxe blends, and denim. Every piece radiates confidence, reflecting Gill's belief that strength and style coexist effortlessly.

"Tuscany's earthy richness influenced our palette and textures, while Parisian artistry shaped the baroque motifs. The equestrian theme embodies freedom, grace, and resilience — qualities I see in every woman I design for," Ranna shares.
