Mumbai — At the second India edition of the Harper's Bazaar Women of the Year Awards 2025, influencer-entrepreneur Diipa Buller-Khosla, honoured with the “Luxury Content Creator” award, turned heads on the red carpet in a striking red saree that blended couture drama with traditional Indian finesse.

The look

Diipa opted for a rich satin-silk Banarasi saree in true crimson red, adorned with subtle gold motifs. What made the ensemble distinct was the blouse: a cheongsam-inspired high neck design. Therefore creating an East-meets-South-Asian aesthetic that elevated the entire drape.

Overall styling remained focused and intentional. Accessories were kept minimal. A pair of gold-tone earrings, a clutch in matching red leather and strappy heels. Hair in a sleek low bun, with soft makeup bold red lips that complemented the saree.

Why it stands out

- Bold colour choice: Red is a classic for Indian glamour, but the deep satin-silk finish granted the saree a modern luxe touch, fitting perfectly for a high-profile awards event.
- Fusion of silhouettes: By pairing a Banarasi drape with a cheongsam blouse, Diipa shows how classic Indian attire can be re-imagined with global influences.
- Award-worthy polish: As the evening's recipient of the luxury content creator award, her look aligned with her personal brand—refined, visual-forward and culturally rooted.

Takeaways for style inspiration

- However for a standout saree look—here, the rich red silk—and keep the rest of styling minimal.
- Combining a unique blouse silhouette (like a cheongsam collar) with a traditional drape can give your outfit fresh relevance.
- When attending a prestige event, align your attire with your personal narrative. If you're already known for luxury or creative work, your outfit should reflect that visual identity.
