The 70s actress, known for her bold style and trail-blazing roles, selected a floor-length red gown that celebrated her heritage. The dress featured thick embroidered borders tracing the hem and neckline, offering a regal frame to the vivid colour. Instead of high heels, she opted for comfortable juttis, giving her step a graceful yet grounded poise. Delicate earrings rounded off the look, letting the outfit do the talking without distraction.

Event context & partnerships

The awards ceremony, held at the Trident, Bandra Kurla Complex in Mumbai, was presented by NIF Global and co-presented by the Natural Diamond Council (India). Other event partners included Vedica as associate partner and Roku Gin (by Suntory) as celebration partner.

Zeenat Aman's presence was as especially meaningful given her legacy and the awards' focus on women who have shaped culture and creativity.

Why the look resonates

- Bold colour, subtle texture: The red tone captured immediate attention, but the embroidered border added layers of cultural richness.
- Heritage mix: The pairing of a formal gown with juttis is a nod to Indian style sensibilities while maintaining red-carpet glamour.
- Icon status affirmed: For an evening honouring icons and trail-blazers, Zeenat's look felt both retrospective and contemporary — a fashion moment that upheld her enduring relevance.
- Styling restraint = power: With minimal jewellery and accessories, the outfit remained the focal point. Her choice commanded the carpet without dominating it.

Zeenat Aman's red dress moment at the Harper's Bazaar Women of the Year Awards 2025 proved that true style is timeless. In one ensemble, she bridged nostalgia and current fashion energy, heritage craft and global glamour.
