At the Los Angeles opening of Swarovski's "Masters of Light" exhibition, Emily Ratajkowski made a bold style statement that perfectly matched the brand's glamorous DNA. The event celebrated Swarovski's 130-year legacy in fashion and film, and Ratajkowski's look captured that celebration in full force.

The outfit: sleek, edgy and crystal-charged

Ratajkowski wore a tailored black coat-dress that blended the structure of outerwear with the drama of red-carpet flair. The single-breasted design extended to her knees, featured prominent front pockets and, notably, a daringly deep plunge that revealed her décolletage with confidence.

She styled the look with black sandal-heels and minimal other garments, allowing the coat-dress to serve as the main outfit. However, the real focal point was the spectacular jewellery from Swarovski. After all a silver necklace comprised of crystal strands that cascaded like icicles from her collarbone. She also wore a matching silver dome ring set with crystals, completing the look with focused accessory drama.

Styling and accessories: less is more, but crystals are front and centre

- Jewellery: The waterfall-style necklace was the hero—its length and sparkle elevated the minimalist outfit into a statement moment. The dome ring echoed the necklace's crystal motif, reinforcing the theme.
- Shoes: Black Gianvito Rossi sandals provided elegance without competing for attention.
- Make-up & hair: Ratajkowski kept her styling sleek and polished—her hair likely pulled back or simply styled, allowing the plunge and crystals to dominate her look.
- Complement to theme: Given Swarovski's "Masters of Light" focus, her outfit leaned into light, reflection and structure: the black base acted like a canvas for the crystals to shine against.
