Bollywood star Sonam Bajwa recently embraced the festive season with a look that proves less can be more. She wore a black straight kurta combined thoughtfully with an ivory dupatta and wine-red churidar — a combination that radiated elegance without going over-the-top.

The colour trio of black, ivory and wine-red gave her an updated festive vibe: rich, grounded and quietly glamorous.

Outfit Details: Balance and Contrast in Focus

Sonam's outfit featured a black straight kurta that anchored the look with simplicity and structure. Paired with it was an ivory dupatta, which introduced lightness and contrast, softening the darkness of the kurta. Finally, the wine-red churidar added a deep hue of festivity, tying in tradition with a contemporary twist.

By balancing these three distinct colour elements — dark, neutral and deep red — her ensemble managed to convey festive glamour. The overall effect felt elegant and considered rather than flashy.

Why This Look Works for Festive Occasions

- Colour strategy: The use of black as base gives sophistication; ivory lifts the look with subtle brightness; wine-red injects cultural warmth and celebration.
- Minimalism meets festivity: While many festive outfits lean heavy on sequins, zari or bold prints, this look opts for minimal ornamentation. The luxe comes from the palette and proportions, not from adornment.
- Versatility: This kind of ensemble can work for a festive lunch, evening gathering or even a more formal event — thanks to its smart styling and colour story.
- Modern festive narrative: Sonam is showing that festive wear need not always mean maximalism. The approach here is refined and mature, aligning with current style sensibilities in Indian celebratory fashion.
