

Tara Sutaria Serves Royalty in a Deep-Crimson Banarasi Saree

Bollywood star Tara Sutaria turned heads in her recent public appearance by opting for a stunning deep-crimson Banarasi saree crafted by designer Jayanti Reddy. The media featured the look, describing the drape as one that epitomised “royalty” through its rich hue and traditional weaving.

The choice underscores Tara’s evolution into a style figure who embraces heritage wear with confidence and sophistication rather than simply turning to western silhouettes.

Style & Craftsmanship: The Details That Matter

- Fabric & Weave: The saree is woven in Banarasi silk—dense weaving and intricate border work. The label Jayanti Reddy is known for combining traditional textiles with contemporary sensibilities.
- Colour Choice: The deep-crimson colour stands out. Instead of a typical bright red, the richer tone gives a regal and mature character to the look—suggesting depth rather than purely festive brightness.
- Styling Elements: The saree paired with a hand-embroidery raw silk blouse, giving it an artisanal touch. Jewellery and accessories restrained, allowing the saree’s texture and colour to take centre stage.
- Make-up & Hair: Tara’s hair appeared styled in soft waves or a subtle up-style, and her make-up echoed the saree’s tone: luminous skin, soft eyes, and a lip tone that harmonised with the deep crimson drape—ensuring the overall look felt both elegant and coherent.

Why This Look Resonates

1. Heritage Meets Modernity: The Banarasi weave speaks tradition; the styling and colour give it a modern edge.
2. Colour Intelligence: Deep-crimson is less conventional than bright red or maroon for celebrities, which makes the look distinctive. It also complements Tara’s complexion beautifully, enhancing her presence without overshadowing her.
3. Statement-Making Yet Elegant: For an appearance where visuals matter, this saree serves as a statement piece. But the restraint in accessories and styling keeps it elegant and not overdone.
