

Addison Rae Stuns in Two-Tone Gown at 2025 CFDA Awards

At the 2025 CFDA Fashion Awards held at the American Museum of Natural History, one of the evening's presenters — Addison Rae — made a memorable entrance. The social-media star and pop singer arrived in a gown that subtly blended classic elegance with modern sensibility.

Her dress featured a silky black fabric paired with a strip of nude, semi-sheer material outlining the neckline and straps — and extending into a backless illusion. This minimalist “naked-dressing” nod felt like a refined wink to the trend rather than an overstatement.

Styling Details: Elegance With a Twist

Complementing the gown, Rae selected a pair of black heels that matched the base of the dress, creating continuity in her overall look. Her accessories were understated yet chic — diamond stud earrings that punctuated the look without overpowering it.

Her makeup featured smoky black eyeshadow, tying the look together by echoing the dark tones of the dress. But it was the eggshell-blue nails that provided a striking pop of color — a small but memorable detail that made the ensemble far more dynamic.

Why This Look Works & What It Says

Firstly, the two-tone dress manages to balance tradition and innovation. The predominant black brings classic red-carpet elegance, while the nude semi-sheer detail keeps it contemporary and daring without being over the top. Secondly, the choice to keep most accessories minimal means the entire look feels intentional and coherent. Lastly, the contrasting nail color adds playfulness and personality — a nod to Rae's youthful brand, but executed with sophistication.

In terms of message: this outfit says she's comfortable taking fashion risks, yet understands the power of restraint. It aligns with her evolving identity — from social-media content creator to style icon in her own right.
