As the festive and wedding season progresses in full swing, young actress Shanaya Kapoor embraced two dramatic ethnic looks that have caught fashion watchers' attention. Known for her bold but polished choices, Kapoor showcased her versatility by stepping out in one floral-lehenga look followed by an opulent, embellishment-heavy design.

Look One: Floral Romance for the Wedding Guest

Kapoor's first ensemble channels a feminine, whimsical vibe: a pastel or ivory lehenga set adorned with multicoloured floral appliqué. The blouse carries a structured cut—think sweetheart neckline or halter style—and the skirt flares with soft movement. Media coverage from other outlets such as NDTV confirm this direction in her wardrobe.

This type of look aligns with wedding-season expectations: it's dressy without being over-the-top, it uses florals rather than heavy zardosi, and it appeals to younger women who want occasion wear that speaks to current trends (pastel, print, subtle sparkle) rather than solely classic bridal seriousness.

Look Two: Maximum Embellishment for the Fashion Forward

In contrast, Kapoor's second look leans full-on glam: heavy beadwork, mirror or crystal detailing. Along with rich fabric, and design elements that don't shy away from statement. Overall outfit referenced in media noted a "silver lehenga with one-shoulder cut-out blouse" at a high-profile event.

Here, the risk is higher—embellishment can easily tip into "costume" territory—but Kapoor carries it with confidence. The styling appears balanced: pared-down jewellery, a clean hairstyle and makeup that complements the outfit. The message: when you wear a heavy lehenga, let it shine instead of crowding it.
