

Amol Ashok Kamble: A Remarkable Journey from Struggle to Artistic Excellence in Tattoo Art

Published on 29 Nov 2025 | By IFI Correspondent

In a world where success is often associated with privilege and opportunities, there are individuals who rise from the harshest realities and redefine success through passion, resilience, and self-belief.

Amol Ashok Kamble, the founder of AK Tattoos, is one such extraordinary personality who transformed personal hardship into artistic mastery—emerging as one of Maharashtra’s most inspiring tattoo artists.

His journey is not just about building a business; it is about breaking generational patterns, discovering inner strength, and proving that true art can rise from any challenge.

Born into a family where government and factory jobs were the norm, Amol never imagined becoming an entrepreneur. His grandfather, father, uncles, and even cousins—all followed the same path. Entrepreneurship had no place in his family’s belief system.

But destiny had a different script.

His father, a factory worker, was deeply affected when a sudden strike brought the workplace to a halt. The stress and pressure eventually took away his eyesight, plunging the family into emotional and financial darkness.

At a young age, Amol had to shoulder responsibilities far beyond his age.

While studying, Amol began working as a border painter, painting signboards and hoardings.

His natural talent for art soon flourished—he drew stunning portraits of Amitabh Bachchan, Jeetendra, and many others. His work was admired, appreciated, and in demand.

This artistic gift helped him support his household.

But soon, the digital era replaced hand-painted art. The work stopped.

The family once again faced a phase of extreme struggle—even hunger.

To survive, Amol took up a job as a driver.

Despite hardships, he continued saving whatever money he could.

Then came the moment that changed everything—

He decided to follow his passion for art and learn tattooing professionally.

He moved to Mumbai, completed a tattoo course, and began working by visiting clients’ homes. His talent quickly attracted the attention of reputed and well-known clients. People admired the fine detailing, creativity, and dedication in his work.

During this period, he also got married and began settling into a good life in Mumbai.

But life had one more test waiting.

Due to unexpected family circumstances, Amol had to leave Mumbai.

His friends warned him:

“Tattoo business won’t work in a small village like Pachwad.”

But Amol chose faith over fear.

He returned to his village with only the clothes he was wearing.

He had no house, no shop, no resources.

A relative offered him a place to stay.

In that same small space, Amol began tattooing again—quietly, humbly, but with unshakable determination.

Finally, Amol rented a tiny corner shop in Pachwad.

There was:

- No table
- No chair
- No computer

For tattoo designs, he visited a cyber café.

Every small step was a struggle—but he kept going.

Slowly, people began recognizing his dedication.

Social media helped spread his work, and customers gradually increased.

Amol's art started speaking for itself.

As his work became popular, other tattoo shops opened nearby.

But customers still chose Amol.

They said:

“Amol’s work is unique—he is a real artist.”

And art always wins.

His skill, consistency, and sincerity earned him trust across the region.

From having nothing—not even a chair—to building a modern professional studio, Amol’s journey is truly phenomenal.

Today, clients come to him from:

- Mahabaleshwar
- Medha
- Panchgani
- Karad
- Pune
- Mumbai

His studio, AK Tattoos, stands as a symbol of perseverance and artistic excellence.

Amol can still recognize any tattoo he created—even after five years—because each tattoo carries a piece of his soul.

Amol shares one powerful message:

“Marathi people must enter business.

Have courage. Trust your art. Start small but start.”

His life proves that success belongs to those who never give up—no matter where they come from.

In recognition of his inspiring journey and exceptional contribution to the field of tattoo art, Amol Ashok Kamble is being honored on a prestigious stage.

His work, dedication, and story stand as an inspiration for thousands of young artists.
