

Alia Bhatt Stuns in Archival Pierre Balmain at Red Sea Film Festival

Published on 12 Dec 2025 | By IFI Correspondent

Bollywood actress Alia Bhatt made a memorable fashion statement at the Red Sea International Film Festival, walking the red carpet in a classic black gown from Pierre Balmain's archival Florilège collection dating back to the early 1950s.

Styled by Rhea Kapoor, Bhatt's look was an elegant ode to vintage couture, featuring a timeless silhouette that cinched at the waist and flowed into a voluminous midi-length skirt, capturing the quiet luxury and craftsmanship of mid-century fashion.

A Look Steeped in Fashion History

The gown — part of Balmain's Florilège line, a limited collection of ready-to-wear couture pieces produced in the early 1950s — is considered rare and collectible today. The classic black hue, gentle scoop neckline, and structured bodice spoke to a blend of old-world glamour and modern red-carpet sophistication.

Bhatt paired the dress with simple yet striking accessories, including a diamond choker, minimal stud earrings, pointed black pumps and chic black sunglasses, allowing the archival piece to shine as the focal point of her red-carpet moment.

Her makeup featured a soft, dewy finish with subtle blush and pink lips, while her hair flowed naturally, completing a look that balanced classic elegance with contemporary poise.

Red Carpet Reaction

Fashion commentators noted that Bhatt's attire evoked the spirit of classic Hollywood icons such as Audrey Hepburn, with its timeless charm and understated refinement. The vintage gown, coupled with Bhatt's graceful presence, reinforced her reputation as a style influencer who can effortlessly bridge historical fashion and modern appeal.

Her appearance at the festival was part of a broader showcase of her global presence, with the actress being honoured at the event and capturing attention not just for her film achievements but also for her fashion choices.

A Fusion of Past and Present

By choosing an archival piece, Bhatt highlighted how fashion from bygone eras continues to resonate on today's red carpets, offering a sustainable and artistic approach to celebrity styling. Her look was praised for its elegance, reverence for fashion history, and impeccable execution — a true standout moment at one of the world's most anticipated film events
