

Karisma Kapoor Reimagines Linen Zari for Festive Fashion

Published on 13 Dec 2025 | By IFI Correspondent

Bollywood actor Karisma Kapoor recently turned heads with a striking fashion statement that redefines festive dressing. Stepping out in a black-and-silver dress by Indian label EKA, Kapoor showcased the festive potential of handwoven linen zari — a textile traditionally admired for its comfort rather than celebratory flair.

A Blend of Tradition and Modernity

Called “Ophelia”, the tiered silhouette features delicate pintuck detailing across the yoke, scalloped organza trims, and rich hand-embroidered zardozi on the hem and neckline. The dress, woven with metallic linen zari stripes sourced from Bhagalpur artisans, represents a fresh take on traditional handloom textiles. Designer Rina Singh of EKA emphasized that the fabric celebrates the craftsmanship of weavers who have been collaborating with the brand since its inception 15 years ago.

Statement Accessories and Styling

Karisma paired the dress with a coordinating Celian jacket in the same metallic handloom textile. The short blazer’s balloon-style sleeves, adorned with hand-embroidered floral motifs, elevated the overall look into a coordinated fashion story. The ensemble was styled with a sleek ponytail, softly smoky eyes, and a muted mauve lip — adding modern polish to the traditional fabric. A vintage Chanel brooch and a black calfskin quilted bag provided a cross-cultural accessory highlight.

Versatile Fashion for the Festive Season

The lightweight yet opulent texture of linen zari makes the look ideal for a range of celebrations — from destination weddings to intimate glowing cocktail soirées. Its adaptability in tropical climates and timeless appeal positions the ensemble as a wardrobe investment that transcends seasonal trends.

Karisma Kapoor’s bold yet refined choice underscores how traditional Indian textiles like linen zari can be intricately woven into contemporary festive fashion, bridging heritage and modern design.

For more style updates & exclusive fashion stories follow indiafashionicon.com