Bollywood star Alia Bhatt turned heads at the Filmfare OTT Awards 2025 with a standout fashion moment that's being hailed as a fresh take on red carpet power dressing. Choosing heritage over hype, Alia opted for an archival piece from French fashion house Hervé Léger's Fall/Winter 1993 collection, spotlighting the growing trend of vintage couture on the red carpet.

Styled by Rhea Kapoor, the black bandage bodycon dress hugged Alia's silhouette with precision, featuring a halter neck and a dramatic, plunging sweetheart neckline—a classic of Hervé Léger's iconic design language. The archival nature of the gown added a layer of historical allure rarely seen at contemporary award shows.

Keeping the overall look minimal yet striking, Alia accessorised with a simple diamond choker and sleek heels, letting the garment's legacy take centre stage. Her hair was styled in a clean, understated manner with soft makeup that balanced modern elegance with the piece's '90s roots.

Fashion commentators have noted that Alia's choice reflects a broader movement in celebrity style, where archival fashion and sustainable trends are becoming statements of sophistication and cultural awareness, rather than mere nostalgia.

This isn't the first time Alia has embraced fashion history; her red carpet appearances this year, including vintage-inspired looks at other high-profile events, suggest the star is intentionally redefining how archival fashion fits within today's style lexicon.
