

Amity School of Fashion Technology Hosts Global Fashion Conference

Published on 17 Dec 2025 | By IFI Correspondent

The Amity School of Fashion Technology recently organised a high-profile International Conference on Fashion, Apparel & Textiles, bringing together leading academics, industry professionals, and aspiring fashion students to discuss the latest trends and future directions in the global fashion and textile industry.

The conference featured presentations, panel discussions, and networking sessions centred around key themes such as innovation in fashion design, sustainable practices, and technological advancements transforming apparel production. Participants gained valuable insights into how digital transformation is reshaping creative processes, manufacturing techniques, and consumer engagement in the fashion ecosystem.

Notable speakers from fashion houses, textile manufacturers, and academic institutions shared their expertise on topics including eco-friendly design methodologies, emerging fabrics, and the integration of cutting-edge tools in apparel production. Their contributions helped bridge the gap between industry realities and academic knowledge, underscoring how research and education must evolve alongside the rapidly changing fashion landscape.

The event also provided students with a platform to interact directly with experienced professionals, enabling them to understand current industry challenges and explore innovative solutions — from fashion supply chain dynamics to shifting consumer behaviour.

By fostering dialogue across multiple regions and sectors, the Amity conference highlighted the importance of interdisciplinary collaboration in addressing the future needs of fashion and textiles. It reaffirmed the institution's commitment to empowering the next generation of fashion leaders with the knowledge and networks required to thrive in the competitive global industry.

The successful conference further establishes the Amity School of Fashion Technology as a key hub for fashion thought leadership, research, and industry-academia synergy in India and beyond.

For more style updates & exclusive fashion stories follow indiafashionicon.com