

India Gets Its Drift Winter Jacket Made for Scrubs

Published on 27 Dec 2025 | By IFI Correspondent

Knya, a leading medical apparel brand in India, has introduced its latest offering — the Drift Jacket, the country's first scrub-ready winter jacket tailored to meet the needs of healthcare workers. Designed to provide warmth without bulk and mobility without restriction, the jacket fills a long-standing gap in functional outerwear for the medical community.

Available in classic black, the full-sleeved jacket is crafted to fit comfortably over scrubs and is suitable for both men and women, making it a versatile choice for those working long hours in cold hospital environments.

Functionality Meets Comfort

The Drift Jacket is engineered for practicality as well as comfort:

- Lightweight yet warm: Made from a fleece-bonded polyester outer and soft viscose-poly-lycra lining to balance warmth with breathability.
- Six functional pockets: Spacious storage for essentials like stethoscopes, pens, notepads, phones, and other tools medics carry through their shifts.
- Roomy silhouette: Designed to layer over scrubs with ease, providing freedom of movement during demanding work routines.

These features aim to support healthcare workers who face long, chilly hours — whether in air-conditioned wards, night shifts, or outdoor commutes.

Designed With Healthcare in Mind

Co-Founder Vanshika Kaji explained that the Drift Jacket was developed after insights from healthcare professionals highlighted a need for warm, comfortable outerwear that doesn't interfere with duties or mobility. Her co-founder, Abhijeet Kaji, added that the jacket reflects the same performance standards as Knya's core scrub products, emphasizing hygiene, comfort, and durability.

The jacket is available for purchase through Knya's official website, app, major e-commerce platforms, and retail outlets across India, further strengthening the brand's position as a trusted partner in medical apparel.
