Queen Latifah's Statement Gown by Gaurav Gupta

Hollywood icon Queen Latifah turned heads in a dramatic ensemble crafted by New Delhi-based designer Gaurav Gupta. The deep emerald-green gown — part of Gupta's Fall 2025 collection — featured his signature sculptural detailing and fluid drape, giving the look both movement and regal presence as she presented an award at the ceremony.

Gupta's design language is known for melding architectural form with elegant flow, and this appearance reinforced his growing footprint on international red carpets.

Sabyasachi's Jewellery Steals Scenes

While gowns caught the eye, Sabyasachi Mukherjee's high-end jewellery became one of the evening's standout elements. Global superstar Jennifer Lopez accessorised her red carpet look with statement earrings and a striking tourmaline-and-diamond ring from Sabyasachi's high jewellery line — pieces that added sophistication and heritage flair to her overall glamour.

The designer's creations weren't limited to a single star. Actress Kristen Bell chose bold Sabyasachi earrings in gold with aquamarine and kunzite accents to complement her sleek black gown, while Parker Posey brought old-Hollywood romance to her ensemble with layered jewels including pearls and brilliant-cut diamonds from the same label.

Red Carpet Reactions and Cultural Impact

Industry observers noted that this alignment of Indian craftsmanship with international celebrity style signals a widening appreciation for South Asian design philosophies in elite fashion circles. The blend of couture silhouettes and meticulous jewellery artistry reflects decades of cultural heritage while appealing to contemporary tastes.

For designers like Gupta and Sabyasachi, the Golden Globes platform offered not only visibility but also cultural exchange — reinforcing that elegance rooted in Indian design can resonate powerfully on world stages.
