Bollywood actress Triptii Dimri captured attention with her elegant fashion choice while promoting her upcoming project opposite Madhuri Dixit at Netflix India's slate announcement event in Mumbai earlier this week. Known for her distinctive screen presence and growing reputation as a fashion influencer, Dimri's burnt orange anarkali outfit became one of the standout looks of the evening.

A Festive and Elegant Ensemble

For the promotional appearance, Dimri selected a rich, earthy burnt orange anarkali set from designers Drishti & Zahabia, combining traditional Indian silhouette with contemporary flair. The ensemble featured a fitted bodice with detailed embroidery and delicate floral motifs that gradually softened into light prints across the flared skirt and paired trousers — a design balance that blends festive appeal with modern ease.

A sheer organza dupatta and minimal accessories, including statement gold earrings and a few bangles, completed her look, while her hair and makeup were kept fresh and understated, accentuating the warmth of the orange hues and creating an effortless red-carpet-ready aesthetic.

Fashion Impact and Season Trend

Dimri's choice of burnt orange — a deep, rich shade rooted in traditional Indian palettes — resonated widely, with fashion commentators noting that the hue is poised to become a desirable colour for upcoming social occasions and festive wardrobes. Her appearance has effectively set the tone for how this earthy tone can be worn elegantly at high-profile events.

The promotional appearance was part of the Netflix India slate announcement, which also highlighted the film Maa Behen, featuring Dimri alongside Bollywood legend Madhuri Dixit. The event saw Dixit generating buzz of her own, including a nostalgic dance moment that paid homage to her iconic “Dhak Dhak Karne Laga” steps — underlining the intermingling of fashion and film celebration at the occasion.

As Triptii Dimri continues to gain momentum both for her upcoming screen projects and her sartorial choices, this appearance further cements her status as a notable presence on and off the red carpet.
