

Building Success Step by Step: The Story of Mahajay Events

Published on 13 Feb 2026 | By IFI Correspondent

For Jayesh Raju Gite, who comes from a middle-class family, starting his own business was not just an idea—it was a courageous decision. Leaving the comfort of a secure job, or beginning a business alongside employment, is never easy. Financial limitations, social pressures, and the fear of failure were constant challenges. Yet, Jayesh was determined to build his own identity through hard work and perseverance. That determination became the foundation of Mahajay Events.

Early Struggles and Hard Work

The initial days were extremely challenging. There was limited capital, no large equipment inventory, and minimal experience. To launch the business, Jayesh had to take loans. Slowly, through small profits, he began purchasing essential materials—lighting equipment, decoration supplies, and sound systems.

Step by step, through effort and persistence, Mahajay Events started taking shape.

Jayesh also focused on building a reliable and trustworthy team. The success the company enjoys today is not the result of overnight growth but of consistent small steps, patience, and disciplined effort.

Challenges and Lessons Learned

The journey was marked by ups and downs. In several instances, events were executed successfully but payments were delayed. Financial pressure increased, and so did mental stress. Some decisions did not yield the expected outcomes.

However, Jayesh chose to treat every challenge as a lesson. Each mistake strengthened his planning skills, improved quality standards, and reinforced his sense of responsibility. The difficult phases became stepping stones toward better execution and stronger management.

Beyond Business: Social Contribution

Mahajay Events is more than just a company—it has become a source of employment and confidence for many young individuals. Jayesh considers his team members as part of his extended family. The company has grown on the values of teamwork, mutual respect, and trust.

From Small Gatherings to Grand Celebrations

In the beginning, the company handled small birthday parties with limited budgets and simple decorations. Gradually, as trust grew, opportunities expanded to larger wedding ceremonies, haldi-kunku functions, engagement ceremonies, sakhapada events, saptapadi rituals, welcome receptions, and grand celebrations.

Today, Jayesh independently manages large-scale events with confidence and professionalism.

He says, “Believing in hard work, honesty, and consistency has always been my mantra. A client's trust and satisfaction are my real earnings.”

Support and Inspiration

Family support played a crucial role in his journey. During financial and emotional hardships, his family stood firmly by his side. Friends and mentors, including Mahendra Gaikwad and Pratik Kamankar, along with other well-wishers, provided guidance and encouragement during challenging times.

Today, Mahajay Events stands not only as an event management company but as a symbol of perseverance, dedication, and the refusal to give up. Jayesh Gite's journey continues—driven by bigger dreams, stronger commitment, and a growing sense of responsibility toward his clients and team.
